Alliance Maintenance Unveils Industry's First Real-Time Online Account Management System

New Web-Based Approach Allows Owners to Run Their Janitorial Companies from Any Computer with an Internet Connection

OKLAHOMA CITY— May 29, 2008—Alliance Maintenance, a commercial cleaning company, today announced the launch of its Online Account Management System for owners of janitorial companies.

Accessible from any computer with Internet access, the Web-based system provides real-time recording of all transactions related to customers and personnel, including establishing new accounts, setting up new personnel, updating personnel details, coordinating project work, and crediting and debiting customer accounts.

“The reason this system is so groundbreaking is that it links all aspects of a janitorial business together,” said Neil Boyd, owner of Alliance Maintenance. “The system gives owners access to a virtual team of professionals who generate leads, handle payroll and coordinate customer billing. Best of all, it’s integrated into one database and accessible via the Internet at any time and any place.”

Not only does the Online Account Management System eliminate the need for multiple software programs, administrative tasks only need to be performed once since the information is integrated. Also, all information is stored remotely, so it is secure in case of a computer crash.

Once data is entered, transactions such as delivering 1099s, billing, credit reports, sales tax reports and payroll are handled from Alliance Maintenance’s corporate office.

“Owners have complete access to the information and control what happens, but they don’t actually have to do all the legwork,” Boyd said. “Literally, it probably saves them 75 percent of the time than if they were actually doing the tasks themselves.”

Real-time updating even allows owners to project their business income months in advance.

The Online Account Management System is accessible via a private Alliance Maintenance Web site. The service is free for any janitorial company in Alliance Maintenance’s network.
